2013-2014 National Venturing President Selected

Congratulations to the NEW 2013 -2014 National Venturing President Annaliese Parker! Annaliese is from the Silicon Valley Monterey Bay Council, at the heart of Silicon Valley in California. She served as the Western Region Venturing president, Venturing Vice President of Communications for the Western Region, and Area 3 Venturing President in prior terms. She now attends Drexel University, where she is studying electrical engineering.

She began Venturing before age 14, with a 55-mile backpacking trip through Kings Canyon to the top of Mount Whitney in Southern California, the highest point in the contiguous United States. She knew from then on that Venturing was for her. Since that first outing she has enjoyed river rafting, more backpacking, camping, all-night service projects, and even meetings. (Her crew held meetings at a local IHOP restaurant, and they were a blast.) Northern Tier in 2010 was a crew highlight event for Annaliese: 115 miles of paddling and portages in Minnesota and Ontario at all hours of the day and night, and constant sightings of bald eagles and beavers.

From there, she branched out and started working at the council level as a Venturing Officers' Association organizer and trainer. She has been a staff member at National Youth Leadership Training several times (her council piloted the integration of Venturing into NYLT) and at the first Venturing NAYLE course.

Outside of Scouting, Annaliese likes to play lacrosse and soccer and be in the outdoors. Through participation in the National Charity League and other organizations, she has received the highest-level Presidential Service Award each year since 2009. She takes biannual camping trips to Yosemite National Park and rock climbs during the summer there. Annaliese introduced her crew to slacklining years before it was popularized by an appearance in the Superbowl, and they now regularly present it at local Scouting events.

Her mission is to build strong and lasting VOAs that, with support from areas, regions and the National Venturing Cabinet, will provide exceptional programs, recruit effectively, and increase the strength and number of their local crews.

"I knew we should've taken that left turn at Albuquerque."

Hello Again Central Region Venturers!

I hope you are all finding this weird winter-spring transition to be the perfect time for Venturing! If you're like me, you're also finding it the perfect time to watch "Are You Tougher Than A Boy Scout?" What do you think?

If I'm being honest, which I am, I was a little disappointed by the first episode. I thought the challenges were not all that exciting and were too Boy Scout/Merit Badge focused; there was not enough focus on being Prepared For Life. However, I stuck with it to find the second episode much improved! The challenges were more exciting and applicable to life outside of Scouts. I've even made a mental note to check both my car and my pack for the "Ten Essentials". What I, as I think many people, appreciated most was the Scouting Spirit this episode showed from both the Scouts and adults.

If you read my earlier article about the Scouting Spirit, you know how important it is to me. In my opinion, that spirit is what makes and defines Scouting as so much more than another extracurricular. Although my favorite line from the show in episode 2 had to be from Paul upon seeing the Cub Scouts approaching: "They're getting smaller!" (who hasn't thought that at one time or another?), I really appreciated the spirit in this one: "Lee owned up to his mistake," Michael said. "If I was his kid, I'd be proud of him."

Then again at the conclusion Paul, the final contestant, said "These guys are Eagles, and they're the best ones in the country, and they certainly proved it today. You showed your true colors starting out with 'Big South' with him trying to help me with the shooting. I got to the tower; you guys were cheering me on. You showed yourself true Scouts."

Even as the adults were being let go, they wished each other luck and were disappointed only in their own efforts rather than other members of the team. There was real emotion shown in this episode—emotion that supports the power of Scouting and its spirit. It is great to think that there are thousands of families inviting that spirit into their homes each week.

What about you? What did you think of the show (you can always e-mail me, or post on our Central Region Facebook Page!) I for sure will be tuning in for next week's episode, while waiting for what we all wait for: Are You Tougher Than a Venturer?
